

ACC 335: Foundations of Taxation

This course will focus on an introduction to Federal Taxation policy and practice. Students will study the process of implementation of tax law and policy in the context of economic and social policy within the political process. Students will also learn the practical requirements of current tax law and regulations as they pertain to individual taxpayers. Students will also apply this knowledge in the preparation of simple to moderately complex tax returns using software similar to what is used by professional tax preparers.

Credits: 3

Prerequisites: ACC 210 ACC 211