

POL 288: Political Parties, Campaigns & Elections

Study of the nature, organization, and operations of American political parties in government and in the electoral process. Students will examine different types of elections and how campaign strategies differ depending on the type of election and the political environment.
Credits: 3